

Writing for Solicitors Journal: Terms & Conditions

Fees

1. We don't pay for articles; we don't charge either.

Author and publisher rights

2. You, as the author, retain copyright in the work and assert your moral right to be identified as the author of the article.
3. We ask you to give us first publication rights for four weeks for comment articles and eight weeks for features, and thereafter non-exclusive publication rights, in all forms and media throughout the world. This means, among other:
  - a) We ask you not to re-publish your article anywhere else for four or eight weeks from the publication date in Solicitors Journal (please see Writing for Solicitors Journal: A guide for authors and contributors for more detail);
  - b) Please do not write on the same topic for other publications within four weeks of publication of your article in Solicitors Journal;
  - c) If you re-publish your article elsewhere, please credit Solicitors Journal and include a link to our website. We suggest this wording: 'This article was first published in Solicitors Journal on [date] and is reproduced by kind permission (www.solicitorsjournal.com).'

Warranties

4. You warrant that your article:
  - a) does not infringe any existing copyright or licence;
  - b) is original and no part has been published before in any form;
  - c) does not infringe the rights or licence of anyone else;
  - d) contains nothing defamatory, inaccurate or unlawful, and no information was obtained in breach of any Official Secrets law currently in force.

Publication

5. We will publish your article either in print, in the weekly Solicitors Journal magazine or any of the journal's supplements, on the Solicitors Journal website (www.solicitorsjournal.com), or both.
6. We may add to, delete, or change the contents of the article to ensure uniformity of style.
7. Please note we will only send you a copy of the proofs of the edited article if time permits. Final editorial control always rests with us.
8. We reserve the right to refuse publication should the article not be of acceptable standard.
